A PARIS RAGPICKER.

Organization, Difficulties and Earnings of Bagpickers.

A LARGE FORTUNE IN ORANGE PEEL

INFECTAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH. PARIS, November 2.- Last year M. Rouff, a dealer in diamonds, lost a fine large pearl, weighing 125 grains and valued at $8,000. He immediately put posters up on all the walls of Paris, offering a handsome reward when a poor woman called on the Commission of Police in the Rue Montmartre, and handed the lost pearl to that official. Her for its recovery. Several weeks elapsed, handed the lost pearl to that official. Her name was Gautier. She was a chiffonniere, or female ragpieker, by trade and had found the pearl in a heap of rubbish in the Rue which are met with over the continent. She Laffitte. She lived in a small wooden shanty in the Ruedu Ruisseau, a poorly tenanted street belonging to a quarter known us Les Grandes Carrieres, so named from the "large quarries" on the northern slopes of Montmartre, where the city formerly got much of its fine limestone for bailding.

The new law that forbids housekeepers from placing their rubbish in the streets over night has been a sad blow to the corporation to which this poor honest woman be-Some compensation has, it is true, been offered them by the tolerance of the police, who close their eyes to the infringement of the regulations in the narrow streets which are lined with shops and But the genuine Deep Rock Ovsters at only warehouses. They have each their own concierge, who permits them to forage at daybreak among the rubbish brought down by the servants from upstairs.

They have a longer day's work now. Formerly they started out at 10 at night, and at 4 or 5 in the morning, when the carts made their rounds, they had disappeared from the streets. Now they must remain until the scavengers appear on the scene, or at least until the last boxes of rubbish have been empried into the common bin placed on the edge of the kerb by each concierge. A RAGPICKER'S EARNINGS.

They have the work of sorting to do when they get back from their early morning task of collecting the refuse. Some sell it to a boss, or trienr (sorter), as he is called, who stays at home and does nothing else. He sits in his room like a gentleman, and there quietly assembles, examines and separates the different articles picked up by his workpeople. He then sells the material to buyers of various sorts.

The business is anything but a lucrative one. Parisians, however, throw away every year more than 300,000 tons of stuff, which the ragpickers collect and sell for upward of 25,000,000 francs, or nearly $5,000,000 The daily returns amount in all to more than 70,000 francs ($14,000), but there are 40,000 men and women to snare the sum between them, so that each gets an average of 1 france en separately), one-half nutmeg, grated; 1 hundred pounds of waste paper cannot be | nut kernels chopped, 1 pint currants washed sold for more than a couple of francs, woolen rags are only worth 5 cents a pound, cotton 3 cents, and bones at best fetch 1f. 85c, or 37 cents per hundredweight. A man working steadily all night, for they still ply their trade on a small scale, despite the edicts of the Prefect-may earn, if he has a tair amount of good fortune, from 40 to 60 cents, but not more. A silver spoon does occasionally turn up in the rubbish; but the pearl of purest orient huewell, so to speak, never. Besides, every member of the corporation of rappickers is well, so to speak, never. Besides, every member of the corporation of ragpickers is bound under severe penalties to deposit any valuables he may find at the nearest relies with valuable household information for valuables he may find at the nearest police office. Each has a card or ticket, with a kinds of fancy cakes; instructions for roasting with that on the card is fastened to the otte or basket. Ragpickers, moreover, have always been noted for their industry

There are no classes or entegories among the rag pickers, as some pretend. The are only the good and the bad. The real chiffonier is readily recognized by the adroitness with which, while only slightly stooping, he transfixes a cork, or any bit of rag or paper, and drops it into the basket at his shoulders. It requires years of patient prac- CLEANING tice to do the fest neatly He contemns imitators, people who would fain pass them-selves off for the genuine article. There are plenty of such shams who wear the blue blouse and go about with the basket, but they are no members of the corporation. They are mere hide venders.

Catskins still find purchasers, and the number of rabbits eaten at cheap restaurants and water-side resorts enables these prowling frauds to dispose of the bodies of their victims. Their calling, however, is a mean one, for cats don't like being shut out o' nights, and those who haunt the Central markets are protected by the police and the watchman. Caterwaulers alone succumb to their wiles. The real chiffonnier, or ragpicker, is proud of his calling. He re mains true to his book. In his family all the men have either carried the basket or the soldier's knapsack. None have disgraced themselves so far as to become a

The "new law" I have alluded to was a decree enseted by M. Poubelle, Prefect of the Seine, requiring every concierge to provide a box for the rubbish of the tenants, and to have it ready for the dust carts on their morning rounds. It came into force January 15, 1884. The evident effect, if not the object of this regulation, was to sup-press the chiffonnier's occupation, and to give the dust contractor a monopoly of the refuse. On sanitary grounds the Prefect may have been right, but policy required moderation even in a question where the health of so large a city as Paris is concerned. The fact of suddenly reducing so large a crowd of honest and useful servants to downright beggary was a mistake. APPEALED TO PUBLIC OPINION.

Public opinion, which, in France, as in other countries of a similar high degree of civilization, is the supreme ruler, spoke up in favor of the rag-pickers, and against that minor sovereign known as the Prefect of the Seine. Many deputies also humanely joined in the protest, so that the now immortal M Poubelle was constrained to offer partial excuses for his action in the matter, and promised that the utmost tolerance should be exercised by the authorities in behalf of this particular and—as he admitted—"most honorable" industry. The ragpickers were in future to be allowed to turn out the new dust-boxes, so as to be out the new dust-boxes, so as to be allowed to turn out the new dust-boxes. The new t well have revoked his decree altogether; but like other rulers who have granted constitu tions or dismissed obnoxious ministers, he doubtless found it necessary to save appearances. The chiffonniers conducted their agitation and, in a measure, gained their point, with an orderliness and good temper that shows how utterly unfit they are to replace the Chamber of Deputies. It would be a dull world indeed if a select assortment of them were to be transferred to the Palais Bour bon, though possibly more business would be done.

I will conclude this article about ragpickers by relating the story of a poor woman, Mme. Vanard, who arrived at competency by collecting orange-peel, and thereby not only helped herself, but gave occupation to others. She became a rich person, a great patroness of art, and a regular habitue of the Opera. Her husbe was in business as a distiller of spirits and ssences, such as are used by perfumers and dealers in liqueurs. She gave him as much assistance as she could. He, however, died, whereupon she tried for some time to carry on the distillery alone, but without suc-

Talking over matters one day with the keeper of a restaurant where she jused to take her dinner, she was much struck with a remark that he made, to the effect that there was a fortune to be realized by some clever person in the orange and lemon peel which was daily thrown away by the garcons

She took the hint and pondered over it. The next thing she did was to sell her stock in trade and become a sort of amateur chifionniere, with this difference, that the object of her quest was orange and lemon peel only. She struck up business relations with the limonadiers and the various waiters who-well, you know how men are-were glad to help a young and, as she was then, good-looking woman. They all, in fact, watched her venture in this new line with more smoothly. The peel idea proved a success. In fact, she prospered so rapidly that she was ere long able to employ other hands to do the dirty work of collecting the material from the streets, as also from the theaters, for the sweeping of which she contracted She presided herself over some 30 young women in her orange and lemon peel ware-house, all of whom were busily occupied in France and abroad to form the basis of Dutch Curacoa, orangeade, citronade and the many kinds of light drinks and aperients has now retired from business, and enjoys the fruits of her former hard-earned labor. The above-printed cut represents one of the houses at Oaklan Square, which have met with such a favorable market. Sixteen of thes

There are now ten new houses building in Oakland Square of th same general design as above, but differing as to the number of rooms are in various details of finish, etc. Of these newer houses two have bee ourchased already before completion. There is the advantage in buy from, purchasers can have occasional details altered to suit their ideas

The advantages of this part of the Oakland district exhibit the the most central and convenient part of the city, being the first place reached after leaving the business section; and it still has all the attractions of the country. Oakland Square is but 17 minutes from the Postoffice by the Pittsburg Traction Road. It is accessible in about same time by the B. & O. R. R. It overlooks the Schenley Park, which is no

The streets are paved with asphalt, sewered and lighted; the neigh borhood uniformly well improved, and the Oakland loop of the Pittsbur Traction, will, within a few weeks, pass by the Square. A handsome ancarefully kept park, planted with trees, occupies the middle of the Square; and old forest trees fill in the background. Houses contain respectively 8, 9 and 10 rooms, with all modern improvements, substantially built and of durable and neat workmanship throughout. Prices $6,500 $6,750, $7,500 and $8,000 according to size and situation. Terms case requiring but moderate cash payment and balance $500 per annu-Lots 30x100 feet to an alley. Apply to
